By R. H. K.

The opinions (if any) expressed herein, are not necessarily those of The Campbell Press.

It's a little early in the season for any comprehensive statistics on the 1939 mortality rate among deer hunters, but any day now we can expect the usual reports to come filtering in: "Son Shoots Father In Hunting Accident," "I Thought It Was A Deer," and the old favorite, "I Didn't Know It Was Loaded." Every year it becomes a little more dangerous to take the field in search of deer, for every year there are a few more hunters, and some mighty careless ones at that. Even the old timers slip up once in a while. There should be written into our hunting laws a clause making it obligatory for every hunter to carry—and use—field glasses or binoculars. He would then have no excuse for mowing down a human being or a farm animal because he "thought it was a deer." And to make sure he ascertained the nature of his target before pulling the trigger, shootings as a result of "mistaken identity" should be construed as manslaughter—maybe even murder, since it would be a deliberate act—and land the shooter in jail for the full term to which his carelessness would entitle him.

New York has a great show, but it isn't stealing from California her natural dowry of summertime tourists. With the bounty of an outdoor wonderland added to the spectacle on Treasure Island, just the reverse has been happening. The spell of California's charms can be read in the record-making figures of the June tourist influx, 32 per cent greater than that of last year, and exceeding by 2,675 persons the heaviest previous month in the entire history of the state. According to border station statistics, no less than 191,856 motor tourists entered California this June.

Tourists present in the state during June did their bit to help consume the 166,000,000 gallons of gasoline which created another record—the greatest consumption of any month in the history of the state. And carrying it a bit farther, we find that that represents precisely $4,981,872.75 in taxes which goes to make more and better roads which, in turn, will bring more and more tourists to California.

So the tourist, it seems, furnishes us with one of our major industries (second to agriculture, I believe) and at the same time contributes handsomely to the maintenance of the very good roads over which he bowls so smoothly. And it all creates a very nice situation for everyone concerned.

There is, however, a large and ugly death's-head hovering about, waiting to take his place, unbidden, at this feast of fellowship and mutual benefit. It is the spectre of "30-Thursday" which, according to my simple reckoning, would shatter California's lucrative tourist business about as completely as anything that could be devised. For while, with the passage of the "30-Thursday" measure, Californians themselves would be climbing on the shoot-the-chutes to ultimate bankruptcy, I don't believe they could make the tourist like the stuff we would be using for money—particularly after a few of them got stuck with a handful of it as they were about to leave the state for home. It would gripe a man from the corn belt something awful to fork out a "twenty" at his first stop inside the line—on Wednesday evening—and get his change in scrip on which he would immediately be required to plaster stamps in the amount of two per cent of the total. The transaction would sour his view-point considerably and, as soon as he could get rid of the scrip he would very likely be inclined to turn around and go home, or take his family to Oregon, or Mexico, for that matter, where the "long green" is treated with the proper veneration, and legal tender is still that kale specified by the constitution of these here United States.

The vigor with which the cause of "30-Thursday" is being furthered is, I believe, a good thing. It is bringing to the attention of people generally the need of some system whereby the elderly can live in decency and comfort, and make way for younger people in

Growers Plant 1 Grades Cots First Time In Decade

Discontinued over ten years ago, the practice of grading dried apricots at California Prune and Apricot Growers Plant No. 1 was resumed Monday due to the extra large amount of the fruit dried as a result of the recent price war.

Plant 1, which old and not-so-old timers will remember as the scene of extensive operations, not only is storing and grading, but packing as well, is rolling cots through the plant at the rate of 25 tons daily, with the clean-up scheduled for the end of next week, according to G. K. Schrader, plant manager.

With the plant running full blast on cots, the first load of prunes was delivered to the cooperative dehydrator this week, and with the rapid ripening of the fruit it is expected all units including a new one shortly to be completed, will soon be running to capacity.

Increased facilities of both the dehydrator and Plant No. 1 assure growers prompt handling of their fruit, with little chance of delay or overcrowding, and it will probably not be necessary to "farm out" any dehydration work as was the case last year.

Spokane Man Visits Here

Adolph Emskamp, formerly of Campbell, was calling upon friends here Tuesday. With his mother he had attended a convention in Cleveland and came to San Francisco to visit the fair, and renew acquaintances here.

Following the death of his father, Emskamp has managed their large wholesale poultry business in Spokane, Wash. Much of their product is shipped east.

While living on Alice avenue in Campbell he and his father were interested in the hatchery business and in shipping day old chicks.

The Press force enjoyed a short chat with Emskamp, comparing business in the two localities.

Local Pear Prices On the Up-Grade

Pear growers of Santa Clara valley were encouraged today by indications that the current harvest season will return enough profit to make up for losses suffered last year.

Orchard run pears are bringing $30 per ton, more than double the price last year. A short canning pear crop throughout the state and invasion of codling moth worms in Sacramento valley orchards have been responsible for the price increase.

Local canneries will continue on the pear run for some time. A large pack is anticipated here and in the five other counties of the district because of a small carry-over from last year.

No wormy pears are picked, a prorate ruling preventing them from being marketed.

PORTOLA RODEO

Portola's third annual rodeo and celebration will be held in that Feather river district city Saturday and Sunday, Aug. 12 and 13. The rodeo, featuring Harry Rowell's famous rodeo string and a number of top-flight riders, will be held Sunday, Aug. 13. The preceding day will be given over to a fast-moving celebration with several surprise events in store. The event is under the auspices of the Portola chamber of commerce.

the world's work. But the current scheme is not the answer, and it's a pity that the cost of the impending election couldn't be applied to the purchase of real ham and eggs—it would go a lot farther that way.

I still have on tap the solution to the pension problem—a solution that would be nation-wide in scope and that would therefore overburden no one state. It's sure-fire, and couldn't possibly miss. But I'm afraid it will not be employed.

CAUGHT IN THE MIDDLE

Local Store to Sell Electrolux

The Leverton Hardware company has discontinued its line of General Electric refrigerators and is now handling the Servel Electrolux gas refrigerator. A small gas flame circulates the refrigerant in this machine, and therefore produces constant cold silently.

J. O. Leverton and J. C. Agostinho are very enthusiastic about the electrolux, and extend an invitation to the people of the community to come in and see the refrigerator at any time.

Charles Rogers of Campbell avenue and Milton street is the factory representative for Electrolux in this district.

"In Old Chicago" At Local Theater

"In Old Chicago," the outstanding picture of drama and romance will be at the Campbell theater on Thursday, Friday and Saturday of this week.

In this great feature picture Tyrone Power, Alice Faye, Don Ameche and other popular favorites have important roles.

This is a big double bill, with "You Can't Get Away With Murder" as the second feature. On top of all, it is "tableware nite," and the women patrons will be greatly interested in that.

The bill Sunday and Monday will be "Maiseie" and "Blind Alley," with "dresserware nite" an added attraction.

"Daughters Courageous" will open a three day engagement next Tuesday evening at the local theater.

C. E. York returned Thursday from a two weeks visit with his brother, Charles C. York in Yakima, Wash. He was accompanied by his brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. C. R. Pruitt of Indianapolis, who had been guests in the York home on Quito road.

Jack Ickes, Cecil Hughes, Paul Farnham, Jack Farnham, Lee Baker and Carl Field, Jr., returned Sunday from two weeks stay at the Boy Scout camp in the Santa Cruz mountains.

The younger son of Mr. and Mrs. Howard Smith, Winchester road and Rincon avenue is in O'Connor sanitarium where he was taken after a fall in the garage which resulted in a skull crack. Mrs. Smith is still confined to bed with an infected throat.

The office of the Campbell Water company, starting this week, will be open during the noon hour for the balance of the canner season. This arrangement will benefit those who are unable to transact their business during regular hours, according to Ralph Hyde, manager of the company.

Shower for Mrs. Joseph Meckler

Mrs. Anthony Raffanti was hostess to a group of friends at a miscellaneous shower last week given at her home on Fourth street in honor of Mrs. Joseph Meckler.

Following the presentation and examination of the many beautiful gifts the evening was spent in visiting. Refreshments were enjoyed at midnight.

Present to honor Mrs. Meckler were Mesdames Frank Silva, Walter Dahms, Bryce Whitmore, Ray Lingo, Wayne Overbeck, Joseph Souto, Dick Kams, Paul Barnes, Jean Hodges, Bud Callahan, F. M. Thomas, Francis Riceo, John Callahan and the Misses Rosemary Smith, Betty Tattum, Bonnie Sullivan, Billie Reynolds and Marjorie Callahan.

Mr., Mrs. Mathis Tendered Surprise

Mr. and Mrs. Ray Mathis were pleasantly surprised Saturday evening when Mr. and Mrs. Lowell Benson, Mr. and Mrs. Axel Granstrom and Mr. and Mrs. Jack Muddock called on them to celebrate their birthdays.

The guests presented Mr. and Mrs. Mathis a gift appropriate to the occasion.

The evening was spent playing court whist, and prizes were given the winners.

Refreshments were served at the close of play.

Fair Folies Star

Starring in the new Folies Berger, now playing to capacity houses at the Golden Gate International Exposition, is Andre Lorain (above), known in Europe as Miss Paris. She is shown as she arrived at Treasure Island with the rest of the troupe for their first American appearance.

Golden Rule Is Still Good Idea, Kiwanians Told

In discussing his announced subject of "What's Wrong With the World," before the Kiwanis club Tuesday, Frank Abernathy stressed the need of practicing the Golden Rule and following the teachings of the Bible which would eliminate greed of power and money.

He also emphasized that over-production is not the great problem but that "A faulty system of distribution which results in under-consumption, is responsible for the economic distress of the world today." Abernathy is secretary of the Santa Clara County Milk Dealers' association. Ira Abbott was chairman.

Next week is strictly ladies' night, when the "female of the species" will be in charge and conduct affairs. Mrs. W. R. Morgan will be chairman, and the speaker will be Pierce Davies, managing editor of the Mercury-Herald.

"Happy Ending" Title of Coming P.-T.A. Offering

The Campbell Union High School P.-T. A. will present another home talent play early in October, according to Mrs. M. F. Hughes who is chairman in charge of arrangements for the production.

The play "Happy Ending," by Don Pierre, is a comedy-mystery and the roles will be ably handled by Mesdames J. E. Witherspoon, Nellie Rutherford, J. O. Leverton, Eva Mitchell, Robert Weaver, Milton Herold and Messrs. J. C. Agostinho, Archie Keesling, Milton Robertson, M. F. Hughes and David Rutherford.

PWA Notes Payroll Decline

As the current 1939 program of the public works administration of the Federal Works agency has passed its peak, in this far western region, and is being completed ahead of schedule, the number of workers employed on the approximately 170 remaining projects has begun to diminish, Kenneth A. Godwin, PWA regional director, announced today.

PWA construction in this four-state area of California, Arizona, Utah and Nevada, was giving employment to 32,323 workmen as of yesterday. On July 25, there were 33,754 jobs provided by this heavy public construction. This means PWA is employing 1,431 fewer workers in this section than it did two weeks ago.

According to Godwin, the reduction in PWA employment will be continuous henceforth so far as the present program is concerned. Only an act of congress, whereby another PWA program is authorized, would enable PWA to resume any increasing of its re-employment activities, he said.

The so-called "spend-land" bill, recently defeated in the house of representatives, provided $350,000,000 for PWA, the money to be used exclusively as loans to further stimulate industry and re-employment.

Miss Barbara Baird has been employed for the past month as part time stenographer at the Campbell Water company. Miss Baird has been taking care of the work usually done by Jack Muddock who has been laid up with a broken wrist.

Walter Cook was brought home Tuesday from the Southern Pacific hospital in San Francisco where he has been undergoing treatments for the past several weeks. Mr. Cook is still quite ill and will be unable to resume his duties on the S. P. for some time.

The many friends of Mrs. W. E. Trask of Johnson avenue, will be pleased to hear that she was brought home Friday from San Francisco where she had been critically ill for several weeks.

Pundita Circle Holds Annual Garden Party

An afternoon of almost perfect weather together with the lovely grounds and gardens of the L. J. Carboni, home on the Los Gatos-Santa Clara road made a delightful combination for the charity garden party of the Pundita Circle Wednesday.

With a lovely old oak tree shading the house and much of the front, an informal "woody" garden has been achieved with wandering paths bringing into view attractive pools and flower beds at the side and rear of the house. Dainty refreshments were served and a quantity of lovely prizes distributed.

Members of the Circle and guests who enjoyed the occasion were Mesdames George Anna Lewis, M. E. Mumma, Earl B. Taylor, R. E. Gunsolus, F. W. Mitchell, Florine Peake, R. Y. Maxon, Archie Keesling, Wendell Thomas, Mark Thomas, J. J. Pardee, Frances Binder, Rose Hanger, W. H. Stray, Hattie A. Baugh, James Turner and friends, Mrs. Goldsmith and Mrs. Mason, Florence LaMontagne, Fred Smith, C. H. Davidson, L. J. Carboni, B. O. Curry, Mark Purmort, George Smith, Jr., George A. Rucker, S. Lloyd Selig, Russell Sund, J. K. Tate, Charles Simonds, David Ribble, G. S. Robson, J. E. Palmer, Allen Rudolph, G. W. Page, H. C. Smith, C. B. Field, Nance Hartley, Laura Allen, and the Misses Anne Schulte, Mary Candee, Marion Peake, Helah Laird, Jane Taylor, Helen Tobin, Mary Tobin, Elsie Merrill and Helen Stray.

FFA to Increase Exhibits At State Fair This Year

Sacramento, Aug. 10—A preliminary survey shows that a record list of entries, in some instances nearly doubling last year, will appear in the exhibitions of the Future Farmers of America at the 85th Annual California State fair, Sept. 1 through 10.

The supervisor of the organization's exhibit, H. F. Chappell, submitted the following results of his survey to Secretary-Manager Robert Muckler:

| Class              | Anticipated '39 | '38 |
|--------------------|-----------------|-----|
| Fat cattle         | 81              | 56  |
| Hogs               | 633             | 339 |
| Sheep              | 336             | 217 |
| Dairy              | 253             | 188 |
| Poultry            | 1078            | 804 |
| Turkey             | 80              | 65  |
| Mechanics          | 194             | 186 |
| Egg laying contest | 12              | 12  |

Chappell reported he still was waiting information from 50 schools, many of whom will be participants.

Historic Spectacle Celebration Event

Indications from motorists indicate that many are planning trips to Sacramento this week to witness the elaborate historical spectacle staged as a climax to celebration of the centennial of the city's founding, reports the California State Automobile association.

Commencing last evening and continuing nightly to Saturday at Sacramento stadium there will be performances of a spectacular dramatic pageant reviewing outstanding events in the history of the Sacramento valley region. It will be presented by a cast of 2000, with impressive costuming, lighting, and scenic effects.

UNCLE SAM'S POCKETBOOK

The official daily treasury statement of July 28 showed the financial condition of the treasury since July 1, 1939, to be:

|              |                  |
|--------------|------------------|
| Expenditures | $753,577,445.76 |
| Receipts     | $273,270,009.96 |
| In the hole  | $480,307,435.80 |

The gross federal debt on that day was $40,654,313,388.59.

Your per capita share of that debt is $312.72.

WHO'S NEWS THIS WEEK

By LEMUEL F. PARTON

NEW YORK.—One day, a long time ago, a 17-year-old girl, Janet Lord, was walking along Hanover street in Boston, a place where you meet sea-faring men from all ports of the civilized world. Attracted by a hymn tune, she stopped before a building, listened to the music of a melodeon, the lusty chorus of men's voices, and, at length, drawn by a power greater than her girlish timidity, she mounted the steps and so entered the headquarters of the Boston Seamen's Friends society. Thus destiny took hold of Janet's life and showed her the way to go.

Now Janet Roper, house mother of the Seamen's Church Institute on South street, New York, is observing the fiftieth anniversary of her work among sailors, and there is hardly a forecastle from the Cape of Good Hope to Calao, from John O'Groats to the Ambrose Light which does not contain at least one shellback beholden to her in any one of an infinite variety of ways.

She is slender, almost frail of physique. There are only a few traces of gray in her hair for all her 66 years, and her eyes snap with intelligence, vitality and kindly humor.

Several years ago Mother Roper devised the idea of publishing lists of missing seamen, copies being sent to seamen's homes throughout the boards. The service has obtained extraordinary results. Sailors out of touch with their families for years have been located and contacts restored, brothers have been reunited in far-flung ports; all sorts of happy things have been effected. In all, to date, 5,327 sailormen supposedly swallowed in the sea, or forever merged in the melting pots of alien ports, have been recovered from oblivion.

While in Boston, Mother Roper met and subsequently married a Congregational clergyman, engaged in similar service. They worked together in Gloucester, in Canada and in Oregon until her husband's death in 1915, when she came to the Seamen's Institute on South street. She has no illusions about sailormen, holding them to be no better and no worse than other men. Her work, and her three daughters, living with her in Brooklyn, comprise her enthusiasms.

JUDGE MANLEY O. HUDSON of the Permanent Court of International Peace at The Hague, recently arrived here, is, characteristically, spending his vacation at Cambridge, Mass., looking into things of international juridical import. He was once Bemis professor of international law at Harvard, a post he took, somewhat in discouragement, when his career was diverted by the refusal in 1928 of the United States to join the League of Nations.

The world's leading authority on all questions pertaining to comity among nations, this world to him is no abstract thing, no matter of geographical division. Human affairs and relationships are his passion. A Missourian—he was born in St. Peters in 1886—he reverses an attributed reaction of citizens of his commonwealth in that far from asking to be shown, he is at all times willing, nay eager, to demonstrate.

Genial, incurably optimistic, mentally brilliant, he enjoys nothing so much as to stand at bay in intellectual combat, indulging with D'Artagnan's ardor in sword-play, in thrust and riposte, until his opponents are either convinced or, at any rate, silenced. He will plunge into contest, or, if no struggle is waging, he is very likely to start one.

Now 52 years old, Judge Hudson entered the League of Nations secretariat with its origin in 1919, and ever since he has been attached to it. Two years earlier, he was with the inquiry and peace terms commission established by the state department and later, in Paris, was a member of the international law division of the committee to negotiate peace. Work then begun led directly to the League assembly where he gave him the second highest vote—48 out of 100—ever received by a candidate.

William Sewell college, 'Liberty, Mo., is his alma mater and Harvard, where he took post-graduate courses, his alter mater.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS BY JOSEPH W. LaBINE

U. S. Rupture of Japan Treaty Seen as Isolationist Decision In Wake of British Surrender

(EDITOR'S NOTE—When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of the news analyst and not necessarily of this newspaper.)
Released by Western Newspaper Union.

INTERNATIONAL: Focus on Japan

The word "defeat" laid heavily on Neville Chamberlain's brow. In Tokyo, his British Ambassador Sir Robert Leslie Craigie had signed peace terms with Japan in which Mr. Chamberlain's government promised not to obstruct the Japanese army in its war with China. But first guesses are sometimes wrong. Though Berlin's Voelkischer Beobachter sneered "Very Disagreeable, Mr. Chamberlain," and though Secretary of State Cordell Hull warned this meant the end of U. S.-British "parallel action" in the Orient, Britain herself felt satisfied. To Shanghai's British chamber of commerce, which protested vehemently, Mr. Chamberlain gave an explanation something like this:

AMBASSADOR HORINOUCI
More bad news is coming.

The U. S. was to blame, since she refused to raise a finger to protect occidental influence in China against Jap aggression. But by granting Japan rights in China, Britain satisfied Tokyo's grievances against western democracies and thus "detached" her from the threatening Rome-Berlin axis. Moreover the European tension made such a settlement unavoidable, since Britain could not protect both her Asiatic and European interests. As a result, full emphasis can now be placed on blocking Hitler and Mussolini; Britain's worries in the Orient are over.

But were they? Critics warned Mr. Chamberlain that U. S. isolation might result from this unprecedented surrender. That very thing looked possible a few days later when Cordell Hull flatly terminated the 28-year "treaty of general commerce and friendship" with Japan. Though Jap Ambassador Kensuke Horinouchi got a formal explanation that certain provisions of the pact "need new consideration," he knew it was but the first of several slaps. A few months from now the U. S. will probably notify Ambassador Horinouchi of an arms embargo against Japan. Meanwhile, Japan turned the tables by announcing its price for a new treaty would be U. S. recognition of a "new order" in China.

As for Britain, there was growing opinion in Washington that Neville Chamberlain is to be trusted no more than Japan. Having sold British interests in China down the river, having violated both the nine-power and Kellogg pact, he probably winced at the next news: Japan got an inch and took a mile, announcing all foreign shipping would be banned from Canton.

POLITICS: Rift

Interesting to Republican politicians was the announcement that Ohio's Gov. John W. Bricker would seek another term, and not run for the G. O. P. presidential nomination. This left convention delegates from Mr. Bricker's state a clear field to plump for Ohio's Sen. Robert A. Taft, who simultaneously notified his supporters to start digging up Taft-pledged delegates.

But Democratic politicians had even more interesting—if more puzzling—news about 1940. Off to Europe (on the same boat with G. O. P. Chairman John D. M. Hamilton) sailed Postmaster General James A. Farley after a mystifying conference at Hyde Park with President Roosevelt. Only after-conference word to reporters was Mr. Roosevelt's remark that such talks had been going on for years, and were "fairly effective."

But everyone knew the subject of 1940's presidential election had been broached, most observers thought Jim Farley had pressed his boss for an announcement regarding his third-term candidacy, and a few thought there was a definite rift between the two men which will not break into headlines until October or later.

Reasons: Mr. Farley is a potential candidate who cannot risk an announcement until after the President himself speaks. Otherwise he would lose much New Deal support. Even so, bad blood began simmering during the Supreme court fight, boiled during last year's "purge" and boiled even harder when Farley's enemy, Paul McNutt, got a fat administrative job. Good Democrats are wondering if these rifts will ever be healed.

ENGLAND: Irish Wit

Commuters at London's King's Cross and Victoria stations shuddered as bombs exploded. Forty were hurt, one killed. At Liverpool the Mount Pleasant post office and a wooden bridge were blown up. Wreckage blocked the Liverpool-Leeds canal and parliament shivered when someone discovered its historic building might be blown up next. Next morning commons hastily passed and sent to the house of lords a bill to give police special powers. Immediately 15,000 bobbies went to work looking for the phantom Irish republican army responsible for this mess. Reason: They want Britain to evacuate soldiers and officials from northern Ireland.

MEDICINE: Victory

Last summer Trust Buster Thurman Arnold obtained indictments against the American Medical association, three other lesser medical groups and 21 physicians on the ground that they had conspired to restrain trade under the Sherman anti-trust act. Specific case: Group Health Association, Inc., a low-cost medical group formed by government employees in Washington, charged that certain hospitals and doctors refused to accept patients referred to them by the association's doctors.

Best guesses last summer held the indictments were a weapon over A. M. A.'s head to force modification of its Gibraltar-like stand against socialized medicine. A few weeks later A. M. A.'s board of governors actually did modify this stand and observers thought the case would be dropped.

A. M. A.'S FISHBEIN
No program, no need of it.

Late July found A. M. A. scoring a victory. At Washington's District of Columbia federal court, Justice James M. Proctor dismissed the proceedings on ground that the practice of medicine is a profession, not a trade, therefore does not fall under the Sherman act.

While Wendell Berge, Mr. Arnold's assistant, told reporters that a government appeal "seems to me a foregone conclusion," A. M. A.'s Journal editor smiled over his victory at headquarters in Chicago. Said he, expansively: The A. M. A.'s principles and policies neither forbid nor ever have contemplated "any opposition to a well-considered expanded program of medical service, when the need can be established." Thus far, evidently, A. M. A. thinks the U. S. has found neither a fit program nor sufficient need for it.

PUZZLERS

Do you know your news? Answer all five and your mark is 100; four, 80; three, 60; two, 40; one, 20; none, 0!

1. Why is south polar area between twentieth and sixty-eighth meridian (shown on map) now in the news?
2. True or False: The Rev. Gerould Goldner, Ohio prisoner kidnapped by Arabs, was released after kissing each of his captors on both cheeks.
3. Choice: An unprecedented growth recently hit the (northwest) (southeast) (southwest) (northeast) section of the U. S.
4. What nationally important event is scheduled to happen August 15 in St. Joseph and Marshall counties, Ind.?
5. What "boner" did R. S. Hudson, British secretary for overseas trade, pull during his recent talk with Germany's Helmut Wohltat?

CONGRESS: 'Splending'

By the time it reached the senate floor, President Roosevelt's $2,490,000 spend-lead bill had become a personal headache to Majority Leader Alben W. Barkley, a scorching of scoffing Republicans (who called it "splending") and a catch-all reservoir into which were dumped such irrelevant riders as that of Montana's Democratic Sen. James E. Murray, who sought to restore old prevailing WPA wages.

By cautious elimination, Leader Barkley was removing every possible obstacle to passage by the time-honored method of modification. By this time it was a matter of face-saving, for any sort of a bill at all would be better than utter defeat. Major modification was elimination of the toll provision on the projected $500,000,000 road-building program. Then Leader Barkley held his breath while the senate downed an amendment to eliminate $350,000,000 in public works loans and substitute the old PWA setup. By an even closer margin, 40 to 38, the road-building program was saved.

SENATOR BARKLEY
He took plenty of scorn.

Mr. Barkley also took scorn from Michigan's Sen. Arthur Vandenberg ("Another tug at boot-strap lifting") from Virginia's Harry Byrd ("The whole scheme is devised to evade the debt limit") and from Georgia's Walter F. George ("A palpable fraud on its face"). Besides the public debt issue, opposition centered around the impossibility of hiking bonded indebtedness in already hard-pressed states and cities. Moreover, spend-lead philosophy failed in last year's election. But with adjournment hanging on the measure, Leader Barkley stuck to his guns and awaited the propitious moment for a vote.

Also in congress:
Q Passed by the senate, the general transportation bill of Montana's Sen. Burton K. Wheeler was shelved for this session because the house made so many changes that immediate compromise was impossible.
Q Nomination of Francis B. Sayre, undersecretary of state, as high commissioner to the Philippines was received from the White House.
Q Middle-west congressmen sought discussions with Secretary of State Cordell Hull and Secretary of Agriculture Henry Wallace on a proposal to barter land to Germany in exchange for products now on the U. S. tariff free list.

Answers to Puzzlers

1. Argentina claims sovereignty over this land, disputing U. S. and British claims, especially those to be made by Rear Adm. Richard E. Byrd in forthcoming U. S. Antarctic expedition.
2. True: Reverend Goldner and his captors kissed and swore "eternal friendship."
3. Northeast.
4. Questions to be asked in 1940 census will be tested there.
5. Made unauthorized offer of huge loan to "buy" peace from Germany.

By Virginia Vale

VIVIAN LEIGH, the English girl whom you'll see in the movie version of "Gone With the Wind," arrived in New York a while ago for a vacation. The vacation had begun a week or so before, but she had spent the first part of it in the country nearby, resting; after 22 weeks of work, with only five free days in that time, she needed a rest!

In many ways she really resembles "Scarlett O'Hara." She has the squarish jaw and pointed chin that you're familiar with if you read the book, and her eyes, though they're hazel, are near enough to being green so that the effect is almost the same.

As for her Southern accent, it should pass muster even with the most critical of Southern audiences.

She'll have to abandon it when she returns to work, for her next assignment in Hollywood is that of the young wife in "Rebecca," another popular novel. She will play opposite Laurence Olivier—it's rumored that their interest in each other is more than mildly sentimental, but in Hollywood that rumor has a way of bobbing up whenever publicity is needed for a new picture.

If you want more data about Miss Leigh for your scrapbook—she was born in India, received her education in Germany, Italy, France and England, and has a five-year-old daughter.

It's a new version of "Smiling Through" that will be Jeanette MacDonald's first picture under her new

JEANETTE MACDONALD

Metro contract. The well known author, Alice Duer Miller, is writing the adaptation, and as usual the studio will spare no effort to make the MacDonald production an excellent one.

Another foreign actress, Ingrid Bergman, makes her bow to America soon. The picture, "Intermezzo," is an American version of one she made in Sweden. She is returning to Sweden when it is completed.

And, while we're on the subject of Sweden, Paul Muni's superb acting aided greatly in obtaining for Warner Brothers permission to screen the life of Alfred Bernard Nobel. Hal Wallis, of Warner Brothers, talked with his nephew and showed three Muni pictures, "Pasteur," "Zola" and "Juarez"—the most convincing argument that could be offered.

No less a person than Sir Robert Vansittart, chief diplomatic adviser to the British government, has been engaged by Alexander Korda to write the lyrics and dialogue for Korda's forthcoming technicolor production, "The Thief of Bagdad." He's doing it between diplomatic assignments. Korda is shooting the works on this new picture; it is one of the most ambitious productions ever to come from his studio.

Michael Fitzmaurice has been typed as an unlucky suitor so frequently on the air that he's afraid it will affect his private life. In one day not long ago he was jilted in "When a Girl Marries," treated as just a brother in "Myrt and Marge," and taken for a ride after winning the heart of a gunman's moll in "Gang Busters."

As you've probably noticed by her pictures, Deanna Durbin is growing up. Gloria Jean, just ten years old, is booked to become her successor to those roles presenting a lovely young girl who can sing. Little Miss Jean has the lovely Deanna's charm and naturalness, and has a beautiful voice as well.

ODDS AND ENDS—John Loder will be the first actor to fly from London to Hollywood. . . . James Cagney has signed a new contract with Warner Brothers, though the current one runs until October. . . . Dorothy Lamour can't get out of the South Seas; she's to co-star with Robert Preston in Paramount's "Typhoon," and also, inevitably, in a syron. . . . Those who have seen parts of "Pinocchio," the next full-length Disney film, say that it outdistances "Snow White."

Dog Breed Is Family Heirloom
The famous Pott bear and boar dogs were originated 150 years ago by the Platt family of Waynesville, N. C., and have been bred by them ever since. They are noted as long runners, relentless fighters and keen trailers. However, the killing instinct has been so assiduously bred in that they must be penned to protect neighboring livestock.

Harpoon Returned
A Formosa fisherman who lost his harpoon recently when it broke off in a 300-pound swordfish, was surprised to learn that George Engel found it while dressing the fish in his market at New Britain, Conn. The harpoon had sunk deeply into the flesh and was covered over when the wound healed.

Ione of Greek Origin
Ione, Iona or Ionia is of Greek origin and probably derived from the name of the Greek colony of Ionia, where Ionic architecture originated. It may, however, be a form of the Greek word meaning "violet-colored precious stone," and one authority links it to Ianthe, meaning "the violet," symbol of modesty.

First Woman's Hospital
The New York infirmary for women and children was the first hospital for women in this country. It was founded in 1853 by Elizabeth and Emily Blackwell, sisters, both of whom were doctors of medicine.

Appropriately Named
Easter island, in the south Pacific ocean, received its name from the fact that it was rediscovered on Easter Monday, 1722, by Roggeveen, a Dutch explorer. It is noted for its prehistoric gigantic statues.

Bounty on Hawks' Feet
The Hunters' club of LeFlore county, Oklahoma, has placed a 15-cents-a-pair bounty on hawks' feet. Club officials said the move is to protect wild life.

Famed Watchdog Dead
Chico, a chow dog that waited half her life for the return of her mistress, is dead at Rockland, Maine. From 1930, when her owner died at a hospital, until 1935, Chico refused to enter any house, spending most of her time on the sidewalks or at the hospital. For the last three years she had been a guest at the city hall. She was 17 years of age.

Hair of Cows' Tails Utilized
A use has been found for the hairs from cows' tails. They are used in filters of air conditioning machines.

Origin of 'Perfume'
Perfume comes from a Latin word meaning "smoke" or "fume," and originally meant to fumigate.

Declining Birth Rate
In 1915 the United States birth rate was 25 live births per 1,000 population. In 1935 it reached the all-time low of 16.6. In 1937 it was 17.

A 180,000,000-year-old dinosaur pasture within a few miles of the Gettysburg battlefield has been reported.

Philippine Mahogany
"Philippine mahogany" has about the same relation to genuine mahogany as "Hudson" seal (dyed muskrat) has to genuine sealskin. "Philippine mahogany" is really a Philippine hardwood, greatly different in grain and beauty to genuine mahogany. Mahogany trees are native to the Philippines.

COTTON

IN NEW YORK: Since Britain agreed in her Anglo-American barter plan to take additional cotton for whatever subsidy was established, the 1½ cents per pound rate recently announced will give her roughly 100,000 additional bales, or a total of 700,000 bales.

IN WASHINGTON: The U. S. and Japan agreed to extend for one year their Philippine islands cotton pact, under which Jap exporters of cotton piece goods agree to limit the annual Philippine importation of Japanese cotton piece goods to 45,000,000 square meters.

IN MEMPHIS: Pres. Oscar Johnston of the National Cotton council planned a conference with Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace to improve consumption and price of cottonseed, thus averting "threatened disaster."

CHAPTER XI

I had told Winter to call me at nine o'clock; but, tired as I was, I awoke at a quarter to eight, and after trying in vain to go back to sleep, I presently threw in my hand and began to get up.

My state of mind was uneasy. I could not reach my lady, because I had given her back the key of her suite. Yet, since I had her chemise, my shirt must be in her bedroom. If she found it, well and good. But if some servant found it . . .

In fact I need not have worried, for about ten minutes to nine a manservant came to my room, bearing a note and a parcel addressed to me. "From his lordship, sir," he said, and bowed himself out.

With starting eyes, I read the following words:

Mr. Exon, I have the honor to return you the shirt which you dropped this morning on leaving my daughter's suite. Perhaps you will make it convenient to leave the Castle at once.

Brief, I remember that I stared at the paper as though it belonged to some dream. Then I sat down and put my head in my hands. And then I stood up again, because something had to be done.

As I made for the door, this was opened and Winter came into the room.

"Find Mr. Parish," I said, "and ask him to come here at once."

As it was, I was more than half dressed, and as I got into my jacket, the Englishman entered the room.

"Parish," I said, "how soon can I see her Grace?"

"Perhaps at ten, sir; but certainly not before that."

I glanced at my watch. The time was five minutes past nine.

"Very well, I must see the Count. I don't think he'll want to receive me, but if you can get hold of Bertram, perhaps you can bring it off."

"I'll manage it, sir," said Parish. "Do you wish to see him at once?"

"Immediately."

"Then come with me, sir," said Parish. "I think I know where he is."

I thrust the note into my pocket and left the room.

The respect with which Parish was treated by the servants of Brief was very nearly as deep as that they were pleased to accord to the Duchess herself, and before two minutes had passed I was ushered unannounced into an elegant library.

As the door closed behind me—"What does this mean?" said the Count, getting up to his feet.

I answered him slowly enough.

"It means," I said, "that we are to clear the air."

"I'll see about that," said the man, and made straight for the bell.

"I strongly advise you," I said, "not to try to have me removed. If you do, you will force my hand; and so, Lord Ferdinand Virgil, cut your throat."

I saw the shaft go home. My use of his proper title hit him beneath the heart. If more revelations were coming, better that they should come whilst we were alone. For all that, his eyes were burning. . . . I was Richard Exon, and not the Duchess of Whelp.

As a servant answered his summons, he turned on his heel . . . I watched him curiously.

There was a moment's silence. Then—"Your lordship rang?" said the servant.

The other spoke over his shoulder.

"Yes," he said thickly. "Has—has Mr. Percy returned?"

"Not yet, my lord."

"Desire him to come here the moment he enters the house."

"Very good, my lord," said the man, and made himself scarce.

As the door closed behind him—"I do not think," I said, "that your son is going to come back."

Lord Ferdinand started about.

"My son? Is this blackmail?"

"It's not even bluff," said I, "but listen to me. I say I have reason to think that your son is not coming back. In view of what I told him last night, I think he will find it convenient to disappear."

The man was staring at me as though I were not of his world.

"Of what you told him? Who are you?"

The question flamed.

"I'm a plain-clothes man," said I, "and I'm working for Scotland Yard."

I watched the blood flow out of the fellow's face . . .

At length, he moistened his lips.

"Does the Duchess know this?" he said.

"No," said I. "Nobody knows—except the Austrian police."

I saw his mouth twitch at the word.

"Why—why the Austrian police?"

"Because I could not arrest you, without their leave. It's a question of extradition. You broke your bail in England twenty-two years ago."

"So you say. But—"

"You arranged your flight with your brother. He booked your passage for you and went alone to the station, taking your tickets and money, to see you off. And, when he was gone, you went—to Paris, instead. And the police mistook him for you . . . and sent him down twenty-two years ago, and he's done his time; but the charge against you remains, Lord Ferdinand Virgil, and I have been sent from England to . . . clear things up."

His fingers were plucking at his trousers, as those of a dying man will pluck at his sheets.

"What d'you mean—clear things up?"

"I'll tell you plainly," said I. "Because of the mistake that was made, another warrant must issue—as a matter of form. Before that warrant can issue, a further information has to be sworn. I am here to complete that information . . .

"What—of—her—mother's—jewels?"

"This," said I. "Your son, Percy Virgil, stole them six weeks ago."

The fellow sat back in his chair, with a hand to his throat.

"You say that he's gone," he said.

"Both he and Elsa have gone. You see, I had instructions to give them their choice. That is sometimes done—if the injured party consents. It tends to avoid a scandal . . . I gave them both until dawn to be clear of Brief. And both have availed themselves of the chance which they had. Personally, I think they were wise; and I must confess that Elsa got back on me, for she packed a suitcase whilst I was engaged with your niece, and, when she went, it went with her . . . But that's by the way. In fact, this is all by the way, for I have so far said nothing of the most significant duty I did last our eyes what your brother said we should see . . . which means that, as I warned you, the information is very nearly complete."

Though I heard no sound, I saw his lips frame the words.

"Very nearly."

"Very nearly, my lord. I have proved all your brother said, except one thing. He declared that if I were to ask you to tell me the secret of Brief, I should ask you in vain. And so . . . I ask you . . . to give me one single detail . . . of what your father revealed to his first-born son."

The man was trembling, and the sweat was out on his face.

"My b-brother," he quavered. "I think, if I could see him . . . I mean, without his statement—the warrant could not issue . . . and could not be—"

"He has made his statement," I said. "I have a copy upstairs."

"But my son is free. Statements were made in his case, but he has gone free. You said that you had instructions—"

"If the injured party consents."

"That's what I say," cried the man. "My brother would never subscribe to my— to proceedings against his father's son. I—I know he wouldn't, Exon. He wouldn't bear malice like that. And then the scandal . . . You said yourself that, rather than have a scandal—"

"Your son has gone," said I. "There can be no scandal there. Percy Elbert Virgil has disappeared."

"I—can—disappear."

He was panting now, and his eyes were half out of his head; yet he did what he could to breathe his face into a smile, as though to do me pleasure and make me his friend.

"I can make no promise," I said, "until I have reported to those who sent me here. The case is too grave. But I'll tell you what I will do. If you will indorse the statement your brother has made, I'll take it to London tonight and recommend my people to let you go. To be honest, I don't think they'll do it, but—"

"How soon will you know?"

"On Friday. And on Sunday I shall be back—with or without the warrant for your arrest. This is upon condition that you indorse the statement to which I refer. Otherwise . . ."

"Yes?"

"In view of what you have admitted, I shall lay an information at Gable without delay. That will insure your detention until the demand for your extradition is made."

"But if I sign . . ."

"I can make no promise," I said. "I'll take the statement to London, and do what I can. You can take it or leave it, my lord. Sign, and I leave for London. Don't sign, and I leave for Gable—within the hour."

The fellow was biting his fingers, with his eyes on my face. The signing stuck in his gullet, as well it might. And then he threw in his hand . . .

"All right," he said. "Give me the statement . . . And you'll do your best for me, Exon. I'm—I'm not as young as I was."

I stepped to the bell and rang it.

"I want my . . . servant," I said . . .

With a shaking hand, Lord Ferdinand wiped his face; and then, still holding the table, he made his way round the oak and took his seat in a chair. When my summons was answered, one hand was shading his eyes and the other was toying with a paper that lay on a blotting-pad.

"I want my dispatch-case, Winter."

"It Means," I Said, "That We Are to Clear the Air."

Thanks to what happened last night, it is very nearly complete."

"And then?"

"Then I shall return to London. And when the warrant is issued, I shall—come—back."

There was a deathly silence.

Then the fellow turned round and made his way to a chair. I saw that he went heavily, as a man that is tired.

After a little he spoke.

"Why do you tell me these things?"

I took out the note he had written and held it up.

"Because of this letter. It seems that one of your people saw me leaving the Lady Elizabeth's suite. I had to convince you, therefore, that I was there on duty—and nothing else."

He let out a laugh at that, and the blood came into my face.

"If you doubt me," I said, "I can prove it. I'd a man outside her door the whole of the time."

"A man?" he cried, starting up.

"A man," said I. "Don't think I'm working alone. The man in question is playing the part of my servant; he's really a sergeant out of the C. I. D."

He quailed to the words, as a beast will quail to the whip. And then, as a beast will turn, he was showing fight.

"So you say," he snarled. "So you say. You prate of warrants and duty and—where's your badge?" His voice rose into a scream. "Show me your badge, you—"

"It's in my dispatch-case," I said "—with other things. Would you like to know the duty which took me into her suite?"

"What then?"

I raised my eyebrows.

"I wanted a word with her maid—a girl of the name of Elsa . . . She's wanted for forgery in Bristol. Perhaps you didn't know that."

And there, when I stood to lose it, I won my game—with a shaft that Percy Virgil had set in my hand: for I saw in his father's eyes that he knew the truth about Elsa . . . and how could I have known it, unless I belonged to the police? "The evil that men do lives after them." The son had delivered the father into my hand.

Lord Ferdinand's head was shaking.

As he felt for his chair—"I swear that I didn't. I swear—"

"You needn't worry. You won't be accused of that. But that isn't nearly all. I didn't go just to see Elsa: I wanted to see your niece. For one thing, I wanted to speak of her mother's jewels."

The fellow's head stopped shaking, and a hand went up to his mouth.

night. I proved your brother's statement that he is the Count of Brief."

My words brought him up to his feet.

"I defy you," he mouthed. "It's a lie. He clawed at the air. 'There is no proof. Because some old doddering servant imagines vain things—'"

"I am not a doddering servant and I have no memories. Yet I can prove the statement your brother makes. I was sent to see if I could prove it—I told you just now. I was sent to complete the information . . . upon which the warrant will issue, the day after I get back."

"Then prove it—prove it to me."

"With pleasure," said I. "The Lady Elizabeth Virgil is twenty-four. She is also the next in line. If you are the Count indeed, why have you never shown her the secret of Brief?"

Beside this, my other blows were so many flicks on the face. Before my eyes, Lord Ferdinand seemed to shrink; and he took a step back and then sideways, and put out a hand to find something on which he could lean.

"Listen to me," said I. He lifted his head. "Following your brother's directions, I found the way to the chamber eight hours ago. I took his daughter with me; and now she knows for herself the secret of Brief. Both of us, therefore, can swear that we have seen with cooking stones. Furthermore, there were great deposits of ashes of sotol, the lily from which a highly potent alcoholic beverage was brewed.

In addition to the lack of animal bones and human skeletons—indicating that the cave was not used to house a family group—and the abundance of cooking stones and sotol ashes, evidence that the cave was a brewery came from a boulder with a hole drilled in it. The boulder may have been used as a brewing kettle.

How Rayon Is Made

Rayon is made from either cotton linters or wood pulp. The raw material is treated with acids or other chemicals to make it soluble. It is then dissolved in alcohol and ether, or other suitable solvents and after purification is forced through very small openings, from which it emerges as fine threads. These become solidified by evaporation of the volatile solvents or by passage through a setting bath. There are four principal processes in use, but this is a generalized description. All of them are derived from the process devised and patented by a French scientist, Count Hilaire Chardonnet, about the year 1889.

Smithsonian Aid Uncovers Traces of An Ancient Race of Indian Brewers

A prehistoric race of Indians who were the longest-headed people ever known on earth may also have been among the heaviest drinkers, according to discoveries in the Big Bend country of west Texas announced by the Smithsonian institution.

A tremendous cave hewed out of a limestone cliff and apparently used as a ceremonial brewery was excavated near Dryden, Texas, by Frank M. Setzler, head curator of the institution's department of anthropology.

While searching for dwelling sites of this mysterious people whose existence he discovered only seven years ago, Setzler located a cave, 60 feet wide by 40 feet deep, that gave evidence of extensive cooking operations.

Setzler and his assistants dug through nine feet of debris, uncovering arrowheads, scrapers, drills and stone knives, but a relative scarcity of the usual cooked animal bones and human skeletons. (The caves ordinarily were both dwelling and burial places.)

In front of the cave was an abnormally large accumulation of

Showing the Latest Button-Front Styles

NO WONDER button-front dresses are so popular for midsummer! They go on without mussing your hair or getting mussed themselves. They look so smart, crisp and tailored, and they are easiest of all to press! No. 1787 is an unusually pretty version, so easy to make that even beginners can do it. Inside pleats make your waistline small. Gathers give a nice round bustline. Make this of gingham, linen, pique or shark-skin, and trim it with lace or braid.

Buttons to the Waistline.

A new and delightfully different version of the button-front is No. 1790. It has buttons to the waistline only. The skirt is cut with a wide lap-over, and a pretty, circular swing. For this, choose gingham, percale, linen or pique, with snowy frills to make it the more cool-looking and becoming.

The Patterns.

No. 1787 is designed for sizes 14, 16, 18, 20, 40 and 42. Size 16 requires 4½ yards of 35-inch material with short sleeves; 1¾ yards of lace or braid.

No. 1790 is designed for sizes 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46 and 48. Size 36 requires 4½ yards of 39-inch material without nap; 2¼ yards of trimming.

Watch Your Kidneys!

Help Them Cleanse the Blood of Harmful Body Waste

Your kidneys are constantly filtering waste matter from the blood stream. But kidneys sometimes lag in their work—do not act as Nature intended—fail to remove impurities that, if retained, may poison the system and upset the whole body machinery.

Symptoms may be nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—a feeling of nervous anxiety and loss of pep and strength. Other signs of kidney or bladder disorder may be burning, scanty or too frequent urination.

RURAL AMERICA'S NEWCOMER

America can prepare to say farewell to the little red schoolhouse.

Born in frontier days, endeared in memory and song, it served its purpose well. But the closing of that era finds a sturdy newcomer shouldering its way through rural America. Its name, the consolidated school.

Educators call it one of the most significant developments in the history of modern education. The advantages once exclusively enjoyed by city school children are now being brought into rural areas. Instead of one teacher, expected to be a jack-of-all-knowledge, and one room, the consolidated, or union, school is staffed with several teachers, all competent specialists in their fields. And instead of one dingy cubicle, there are several rooms with facilities and equipment to provide rural America's youngsters with the benefits of modern education offered city children.

Within the past five years the shutters have been drawn for good on 35,000 of these one room "little red schoolhouses" throughout the United States. Rural taxpayers have found this modern school unit actually costs less to support. And though it means many children must travel farther to school than formerly, another newcomer, motor transportation, came into the picture when the little red schoolhouse went out. In a few weeks, school buses will be carrying 3,250,000 pupils between school and home to provide education with a life-line reaching all school age youngsters. With 40 per cent of the nation's communities not reached by railroad, their dependence on motor transportation for the success of the new rural school system fully equals their reliance on it for commerce with cities.

Adapted to the needs of an earlier era, the old retreats before the new. The little red schoolhouse prepares to exit, leaving to a new age better ways of carrying on its high task.

EXTRA! EXTRA!

"Extra! Extra! Here y'are Mister, papers one dollar apiece!"

So might a newsboy of California's gold rush days have shouted his wares, and they would have sold like hotcakes, too!

Reporting on the fabulous prices of the American period, Dr. John W. Caughey of the history department of the University of California, Los Angeles, gives the modern newspaper reader something cheerful to reflect on.

For only a few pennies he receives a paper bearing news of his community, state, nation, and of events in the far corners of the earth. Three generations ago it was a far different story in California. People stood in long lines for hours before postoffice windows, anxiously awaiting mail bringing news from the east. And when one astute traveler arrived from New York, bringing with him 1,500 copies of Horace Greeley's "Tribune," he did a land-office business for two hours. At the end of that short time every issue had been sold—at one dollar a copy!

Today news of an entire city, of the whole world, is laid at the doorsteps of Californians for a tiny fraction of that cost. Technology has helped achieve it through the revolutionary advance of the printing press. Lines of communication encircling the globe have helped achieve it by placing the most isolated hamlet right on the news-fronts of the world. And the continuous and helpful support of advertising, and readers' support of advertisers, also helped achieve it.

That is why today's newspapers can provide ten times the news of those one dollar copies of a hundred years ago—at one-twentieth of the cost!

NOTHING TO BEEF ABOUT

From now on, there should be less beefing in the world—about beefsteaks, anyway.

With the department of agriculture announcing a new substance, extracted from pineapple, which can make even the toughest meat as tender as a choice filet, there's a promise of more contented living for everyone save vegetarians.

Since the way to a man's heart is said to be through his stomach, bromelin, this new enzyme which goes to work on the tough connective tissues and breaks them down into compliant tenderness, should make success certain for brides and housewives. Even if improper cooking has, figuratively speaking, let a good steak leap from the frying pan into the fire, there's now the likelihood that a dash of bromelin can salvage the charred remains.

In brief, the discovery of this new enzyme says a mouthful!

LOUISIANA CLEANS HOUSE

The people of Louisiana went on a glorious jag a few years ago, with their host Huey Long guaranteeing all expenses paid.

But now it's goodbye to all that. The sky-larking party is over. In the chill aftermath of its saturnalian spending orgy, Louisiana finds itself with a severe hangover, a flock of bad checks still to be paid for, and a disordered political house very much in need of cleaning.

As they have had to do before when political corruption left its tracks in high places, the people are reaching for a broom to clean up the wreckage—and someone to wield it. Out of a welter of charges involving embezzlement, chicanery, and "framed" elections, has arisen the hope of many disillusioned Louisianans that some white knight in shining armor will arise to lead their campaign of reform to victory.

Of men on horseback, Louisiana has had no lack in recent weeks. No less than four men are clamoring for popular support today as reform candidates, but the record of each is darkened by past association with the Long political machine. In the cheerless light of the morning after, reform groups want no "reformed" candidate, but a courageous leader, one who has never danced to the Kingfish's tune.

PROBING THE PACIFIC

Science recognizes no national frontiers. The free interchange of knowledge between men of many nations, collaboration on common problems by scientific workers in laboratories separated by thousands of miles, are as needful to the progress of science as sunlight and air.

For the past two weeks California has been host to the Sixth Pacific Science congress, and seen at first hand the lively exchange of experiences and ideas as scientists gathered from a score of nations to pool their information and map out new courses of inquiry on the problems of countries bordering the Pacific basin.

That "basin" is a vast one, with the borders of the Pacific extending from the coastline of the Americas westward to the Philippines, and from the Antarctic continent northward to the Arctic ocean. From far-off China, from South America, from the scientific institutions of Europe, as well as from representatives of the United States, came stories of the triumphs and setbacks of science in the Pacific nations—combating typhus in the United States, in Chile, in the war-torn zones of China, tracking down the tick, source of deadly fevers, in tropical jungles, searching out new knowledge in the fields of geophysics, geology, soil chemistry, and marine biology.

From this pooling of minds, the nations represented gained better weapons for attacking problems common to all.

SAYING IT WITH BOMBS

The reign of terrorism launched in England by the I.R.A. since the first of the year has now forced the British government to strike back.

The goal of the I.R.A.—to unite all Ireland under one flag and one constitution—is the natural ambition of a state which has only recently severed its ties with Britain, and seeks now to sever those which still bind northern Ireland to England.

That goal enjoys the support of Prime Minister Eamon de Valera of Ireland. He has been working to achieve it through cool and earnest negotiation. The I.R.A. has done its speaking with tongues of fire, but the long series of bombings attributed to it in England since January have done more than simply injure its cause.

The campaign of terrorism has killed and maimed innocent victims, incapable of either hindering or helping the program, resulted in the outlawing of all Republican army members in England, incurred the condemnation of Premier de Valera and their own countrymen, and forced Britain's people to yield up several of their long-cherished civil rights. For in passing the recent measure increasing the powers of Scotland Yard, parliament, of necessity, extended the rights of seizure and search to all British subjects.

The net result today—much lost, and nothing gained.

• If the nation is living within its income, its credit is good. If, in some crises, it lives beyond its income for a year or two, it can usually borrow temporarily at reasonable rates. But if, like a spend-thrift, it throws discretion to the winds and is willing to make no sacrifice at all in its spending; if it extends its taxing to the limit of the people's power to pay and continues to pile up deficits, then it is on the road to bankruptcy.—Franklin D. Roosevelt, Oct. 19, 1932.

ANN SHERIDAN, young screen star—"It's a mistake for a girl to think she can get by on oomph in the movies. But it does help!"

W. G. WEAVER, publisher San Anselmo Herald—"Too many people forget to have fun. If they'd trade their 'business' shoes for 'play' shoes a little oftener, they'd find the old shoes a lot springier when they donned them again."

CHARLES A. WHITMORE, editor Visalia Times-Delta—"We are paying the price for six years of molycoddling, inefficient and extravagant political handling of both direct and work relief. The reaction is setting in. The milk of human kindness is beginning to curdle."

MAX BAER, in Hollywood for new picture—"I'm here to pull the movie business out of the red. Maybe after that I'll pull the fight game out of the dumps. I'm still just a mere boy of 30!"

U. S. WEBB, former attorney-general—"If the Thirty-Thursday plan should become law, it would bankrupt the state of California and everybody in it, and would discredit California among the sisterhood of states."

WILL SHARKEY, publisher Martinez Gazette—"If referendum holds up the Atkinson oil control bill, and in consequence the bottom drops out of the oil industry and gasoline falls to a ruinous price and wages fall along with it—then will come the sad awakening."

O. C. SPONHEIM, San Mateo businessman—"Real estate offers the soundest investment opportunity in California today. The man who buys a home or other property at current prices isn't speculating—he's saving."

JOHN BROWN, S. F. WPA worker, swimming frantically after would-be suicide leap—"Help, help! I've changed my mind!"

EXPOSITION EVENTS

From Aug. 12 to Aug. 18

Treasure Island, Aug. 10—With the summer vacation schedule bringing hundreds of extra entertainment features to the regular daily programs, coupled with the recently adopted policy of presenting top-flight entertainers free of charge, the week of Saturday, Aug. 12, to Friday, Aug. 18, will provide Treasure Island visitors with an extraordinarily excellent and varied bill of entertainment fare.

Under the new policy such internationally famous entertainers as Ted Lewis and his band, Edgar Bergen and Charlie McCarthy, and others have been presented in the Temple Compound in free afternoon shows, and free dances to famous bands have been provided every night in the new Treasure Island music hall.

Continuation of this plan will bring to the exposition during the coming week another famous entertainment unit, selected from among the headliners in the world of the theater, the radio and the dance palaces, without charge to visitors.

The new Folies Bergere, direct from Paris, which is doing a capacity business on Treasure Island, will be shown three times daily, with four performances on Saturdays and Sundays, at the California auditorium, and the popular "Cavalcade of the Golden West" will continue its regular schedule.

During the coming week there will be special programs celebrating days set aside for four states, Alaska and half a dozen counties, as well as numerous California communities. There will be a special day for the American Legion and a two-day dahlia show in the Alameda-Contra Costa County building.

Saturday, Aug. 12 will be Texas day, the American Legion will stage a special celebration with National Commander Stephen Chadwick present, the dahlia show will open, and Siskiyou county will have a program of interest.

Sunday will bring celebrations of a special nature for Sausalito day, Veterans of the Philippine Insurrection, the fourth division, and railroad fans, with the dahlia show in its second and final day. Connecticut day will be marked

The FARMERS CORNER

by RALPH H. TAYLOR

Executive Secretary
Agricultural Council of California

California taxpayers won round one in their battle for a curb on state spending and an end to new state taxes during the hectic and historic legislative session which adjourned at Sacramento on June 22 after 131 days of perpetual motion.

But it was a bitterly-contested, hard-fought fight—and round two is coming up when the special session of the legislature is convened in December or January.

As a matter of fact, the fight will undoubtedly rage all summer in anticipation of the coming extra session, for Governor Olson has announced his intention of carrying the battle to the people, and the members of the economy bloc in the legislature may be expected to do likewise.

Under the circumstances, it behooves California taxpayers—whether farmers or home-owners, employers or wage-earners—to know what happened at Sacramento, what is likely to happen this summer and what may happen when the two houses are called into session again to reconsider the tax proposals they recently rejected.

Of the $63,000,000 in new state taxes and increases in existing state taxes which Governor Olson asked of the 1939 legislature, only the unopposed gift tax—designed to produce approximately $1,500,000—received legislative approval.

Higher income taxes, higher business, bank and corporation taxes, higher "death taxes" and new taxes on natural resources, et cetera, were all defeated. Also rejected were new and exceedingly heavy payroll taxes for compulsory health insurance and other new governmental innovations which would have hit the pocketbooks of both employers and workers.

But the fact that the economy bloc won out—not only defeating the proposed tax increases, but also chopping the record-high state budget and placing some restriction on expenditure of relief funds—was due to the support which economy-minded lawmakers received from the people in their home districts.

The pressure groups of the Workers' Alliance and the ultra-liberals and radicals who believe that higher taxation is the road to a new Utopia were simply out-petted by rebellious workers and employers who have been paying the bills for non-workers and the beneficiaries of government bounty.

With taxes in many of the state's leading businesses and industries taking a bigger share of the returns than is available for all the workers who operate the businesses and the stockholders who provide the capital, California taxpayers simply staged a revolt that rocked the capitol and served notice they would not tolerate added tax exactions.

But the propaganda machine of the spending brigade is already at work—and is certain to work overtime during the coming months, seeking to high-pressure legislators into again releasing the brakes and opening the vaults of the state treasury.

There are announcements that the state deficit may reach a peak of $100,000,000 sometime this fall; that the state credit is endangered; that border stations must be closed; that state services must be curtailed; that new taxes MUST be imposed.

Admittedly, there is a large state deficit, though the $100,000,000 figure is probably propaganda, rather than a factual estimate. But state deficits have been remedied, in some instances, by reduced state spending. Over a period of years, California's deficit could be cleared in the same manner, if government officials realized that the people who elected them couldn't and wouldn't carry increased burdens. And the state's credit is far more likely to be endangered by thoughtless supporters of the ham and eggs pension

Towering Beauty At Fair

With the delicate leaves and branches of a tree framing this mystic Tower of the East at the California World's Fair, the spot is another one where visitors to the Exposition find enchantment. Each of the many beautiful courts and fountains has its own particular charm, and together they make Treasure Island a true magic isle of romance.

Miss Lois Bachman is ill at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Julius Bachman on Everett street. Miss Bachman was taken sick last Thursday and has been confined to bed since. She is employed at the San Jose Abstract and Title Insurance company, and has been forced to take an indefinite leave of absence.

Miss Pearl Swayze visited the J. H. Bachman family Saturday on her way to the exposition, and again Tuesday evening enroute to Los Angeles.

Buddy Whitmore, Ray Fish, Jr., and Lowell Grattan are spending ten days at the Y. M. C. A. camp at Boulder Creek. They plan to be home Monday. Patricia Whitmore will also return home Monday from a week spent at the Methodist Sunday school camp at Monte Toyon.

The Drew Canning company is working two shifts on fruit cocktail. The cannery is now running at full capacity.

Mr. and Mrs. Anthony Raffanti visited their son, Bobby, Sunday at the Y. M. C. A. camp at Boulder Creek. Bobby has been at the camp three weeks and will return home Monday.

Mrs. Frank R. Anderson, Marilyn and David Anderson and Nora Brydon were in attendance at the fair Wednesday.

Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Foster, their daughter, Jean and Max Foster of Grinnell, Iowa who had been guests of Mrs. Lavinia Grattan and Mr. and Mrs. Worthin Grattan left the last of the week on their return journey. While here they visited the exposition, the Big Trees and other points of local interest.

Mrs. M. W. Horn, a sister-in-law of Mrs. Worthin Grattan is here from Melbourne, Ia., spending a month visiting and sight-seeing.

Mrs. George Thompson of Stockton is a house guest of Mrs. Millard F. Hughes.

proposal (many of them, the same people who are demanding new taxes)—than by the state deficit. California public officials need to consider the problems of rank and file, working Californians, who pay the bills. And working Californians need to compel them to take heed, if they fail to do it voluntarily. By that means and that means only, can they win the second round of the tax battle.

Cities Seek Greater Safety For Pedestrian

America's No. 1 urban traffic accident problem—pedestrian deaths and injuries—is being systematically attacked by a nationwide array of cities enrolled in the pedestrian safety contest sponsored by the American Automobile association, it was reported today by the California State Automobile association, AAA affiliate in this state.

More than 200 cities have already entered the contest and the number is steadily increasing, the report stated. California entrants thus far include Alameda, Berkeley, Palo Alto and Stockton.

Concentration upon the pedestrian phase of the traffic accident situation is the result of an AAA survey which disclosed that motor vehicle fatalities involving persons on foot have risen to approximately 75 per cent of all traffic deaths occurring in cities.

Mrs. Cora Owens who had been the house guest of Mrs. W. I. Merrill, a friend of girlhood days, left last week for Los Angeles. Mrs. Owens lives in Lynn, Mass., and was touring the Pacific coast, coming to Campbell from Seattle. The ladies had not met for 30 years, so had an interesting time reviewing the past.

Mrs. Anthony Jurras and Mrs. Frank Jacobson were visitors in San Francisco last Wednesday.

The county road marking crew is at work today marking pedestrian crossings at intersections on Campbell avenue in the business district, which should materially lessen the hazards for pedestrians.

Dr. and Mrs. Harold D. Cremer of Moscow, Idaho, are the happy parents of a daughter, Anita Claire, born Sunday night in a Spokane, Wash., hospital. The little miss weighed seven pounds, fourteen ounces. The proud grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. D. H. Cramer of Campbell and Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Burke of Palo Alto.

Clyde Hughes recently accepted a position in San Francisco with an oil company, and with his family has taken up residence in that city.

Dr. Cecil Cutting who has been head surgeon for the past year at the Grand Coulee dam project in Washington state, has been promoted to assistant superintendent of the hospital, according to word received by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. T. A. Cutting.

Miss Margaret James of Casey road, her aunt, Mrs. Pearl Gibson, and Miss Ida Kasten of San Jose left last week for Lansing, Mich., to purchase an automobile which they will drive home. On their return trip they plan to visit relatives in Chicago and Iowa City.

Bruckart's Washington Digest

Shaping of National Policies
Influenced by Work of Congress

Party Defections, Defeats and Victories of President
Have Important Place in Picture; Growing Split
In Democratic Party Blamed on Roosevelt.

By WILLIAM BRUCKART
WNU Service, National Press Bldg., Washington, D. C.

WASHINGTON.—When one examines political situations and maneuvers, there is nearly always a tendency to overestimate the importance of the current activity. That is to say, an action or a policy just completed is generally likely to be given an appraisal that exaggerates its significance. Political plans, on the contrary, ought to be looked upon in the mass. This is especially true of national politics which, of course, involves the national party and voting strength.

For these reasons, there seems to be need for a review of the first session of the seventy-sixth congress. The things that have happened, the party defections and party realignments, temporary defeats for the President and balancing victories for him and his political philosophy, all should be analyzed. The result of all of these things is the important bit of history. It is important because it has a direct bearing on the 1940 political campaign and voting. It is more valuable to see the shaping of national policies at this time than usual because of the efforts being made to put forward President Roosevelt for a precedent-breaking third term in the White House.

Most every one has been aware, since 1936, that a split in Democratic party strength has been growing. Mr. Roosevelt, himself, led the way and was perhaps the main cause of the present wide breach. It will be remembered how he sought to "purge" the Democratic party of Senators George of Georgia; Smith, of South Carolina; Tydings, of Maryland; and Representative O'Connor of New York. He failed on all except the New York representative. So there were three senior members of the United States able, openly, to battle Mr. Roosevelt's policies. Around these three have since collected all of those Democrats who fear radical leadership in the party; who fear a Roosevelt third term and who are determined to restore party control to those who have been responsible for a long line of party successes.

Old-Line Democrats Succeed In Building 1940 Platform

There has been much written and spoken about maneuvers underneath, and what the results of these maneuvers are. I am inclined to the opinion, however, that only now after seven months of the first session of the seventy-sixth congress are we able to evaluate them properly. The various acts of congress, the various attitudes and defeats and victories can now be placed in the basket. When they are shaken up, it strikes me that the old line Democrats have succeeded in building what amounts to a national Democratic platform for 1940. And that platform can reasonably be said to be one upon which no real New Dealer can run for the presidency next year.

Perhaps, the statement of Senator Joe Guffey of Pennsylvania evaluates the circumstance better than I can do. Guffey, New Dealer, closer associate of the President than Mr. Roosevelt sometimes desired, asserted in a recent radio address that Mr. Roosevelt "has had no term in the White House at all, for his work was destroyed by the Supreme court in the first term and was wrecked by Tories in the second years."

When one places the seething mass of legislation, bureaucracy and propaganda under a microscope, Mr. Guffey undoubtedly is correct—if the view is from the New Deal angle, alone. The wild reforms proposed by the brain trust of the first term were knocked down by the Supreme court. Further attempts to rebuild America were slowed down by congress, little by little, until the current session of congress has been telling the President what to do in a great many instances. Thus, it can be said, the President remade the Supreme court to his liking, but he lost congress, and it is well to remember just here that the Supreme court decides only questions that are brought before it. If congress does not enact questionable laws, the highest court does not get a chance to hold them constitutional.

Congress Takes Back Power Delegated to Mr. Roosevelt

It becomes less difficult, therefore, to sit back now and use hindsight. We see, practically from the time of the "purge," how congress began to take back powers it delegated to Mr. Roosevelt in the hectic days of 1933 and 1934. A bite here and a bite there. The pinnacle was reached when the senate kicked out the President's power to devalue the dollar and took away the right to buy silver with a repulsive and disgusting subsidy. Of course, after a brief lapse, those powers were given back to the President, but there is significance in that fact. It showed that when congress is ready, it will be just as free to take away from the President as it was to give powers to him before the party breach.

In between the extremes just mentioned, and particularly within the current session of congress, there have been unmistakable signs of congressional domination. I do not mean to say that the Democratic wheelhorses in congress have thrown the President overboard. They have chosen to chisel away his strength; they have avoided knock-down and drag-out battles as much as possible, unless the issues were paramount. Their strategy plainly has been to build strength for themselves in their own districts and in their own states rather slowly. The whole thing amounts to a program of education of the voters who a few brief years ago were hailing Mr. Roosevelt as the national savior. I believe the work has gone so far now that most of the Democrats in congress have considerable support in their home playgrounds.

To elaborate on the generalities which have been stated above, I may cite such things as the house determination to continue the WPA investigation—something New Dealers did not want. Additional funds were voted for continuation of the investigation of un-American activities, headed by Representative Dies of Texas—a program openly attacked by the New Dealers. The constant threats of congressional investigation of the labor relations board and the federal communications commission are two other things which the inner circle of New Dealers are moving heaven and earth to prevent.

Many Things That Annoyed New Deal Faction of Party

Reduction of the WPA fund total early in the spring, while small, was just another annoying mosquito bite on the New Dealers' legs. The voting of furloughs for WPA workers who have had 18 months of continuous checks was disliked by and was thoroughly distasteful to the New Deal faction of the party.

Nor did Mr. Roosevelt want to see congress change the tax laws. Senator Harrison of Mississippi, together with Undersecretary Haynes of the treasury, worked out the law that was passed. It eliminated the principal schemes for reform that the New Dealers had sponsored in the days when congress was completely subservient to the White House. It is to be noted just here, too, that these tax changes had the support of Chairman Doughton of the house ways and means committee, who had been a dependable "yes man" for the President, up to that time.

Changes that were made in the social security laws were never acceptable to the inner circle of New Dealers who constitute the President's principal advisors. But, again, congress showed its teeth in only a snarl.

The senate foreign relations committee gave the administration something more than name-calling, however, on the question of neutrality legislation. This, of course, followed a real spanking by the house. The house, it will be recalled, took the administration's neutrality program and butchered it right out where all could see what was going on.

President Gets Plain Mad The Way Things Are Going

It might be proper at this time to call attention to another phase of the situation here, although it can hardly be said to be a part of the circumstance that I have been discussing. Lately, Mr. Roosevelt has had his "Dutch up," so to speak, and has not minced words. For example, he called in Lyle Wilson, head of the United Press bureau here, and denounced Mr. Wilson and his organization for sending out dispatches which the President said were untrue. These dispatches, or one, particularly, told of a purported split between Mr. Roosevelt and the able and patient Secretary Hull of the Department of State. Their differences were reported to be over the President's policy on neutrality. Anyway, the incident wound up with the President taking the almost unprecedented action of issuing a public statement accusing the United Press of falsification of the facts.

This series of incidents came after many reports were in circulation at the Capitol that Mr. Roosevelt was mad about the way things were going. Whether these reports were true or false, they were seized upon by Republicans and by the Democrats who no longer want any part of Roosevelt policy. They were spread in the most fanciful fashion and there was no opportunity overlooked by which those old meanies around the congress could add to the President's discomfiture.

Of course, all of this is a part of the great game of politics. (Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

SANDWICHES MAINSTAYS OF SUMMER MENUS
(See Recipe Below)

'Make Mine a Ham on Rye'

Sandwiches in all their delightful variety are the mainstays of summer menus. Grilled sandwiches make a "one-dish meal" for lunch or supper; substantial sandwiches with hearty fillings make a satisfying picnic lunch; and dainty "tea sandwiches," served with a frosted beverage, are perfect for a party.

But it keeps a woman's wits working overtime to provide sandwiches that are new and different! And new and different they must be, if they're to retain the appetite appeal which makes them popular.

Success With Sandwiches.

1. Use bread that is a day old.
2. Cream the butter—don't melt it.
3. Whatever the filling, use plenty of it.
4. Keep sandwiches moist for several hours by wrapping them in wax paper or in a clean cloth wrung out of hot water.
5. Remember to use a variety in breads, as well as fillings—whole wheat, rye, graham, oatmeal, brown bread, raisin bread, nut bread and orange bread all make delicious sandwiches.
6. Use left-over sandwiches for next day's lunch or supper by "french toasting" them—merely dip the sandwiches in beaten egg, pan fry them on both sides, and serve hot with a garnish of watercress or sweet pickle.

Raisin Orange Filling for Sandwiches.

(Makes 8-10 sandwiches)
2 cups raisins
2 teaspoons grated orange rind
4 tablespoons orange juice
Grind the raisins, add orange rind and juice and blend well. Use with white or whole wheat bread.

Banana Butter Filling.

(Makes 1 cup filling)
1 ripe banana
½ cup peanut butter
¼ cup dates (cut fine)
1 teaspoon lemon juice
Mash banana with a fork and thoroughly blend in remaining ingredients.

Mayonnaise Sandwich Loaf.

1 loaf bread
1 head lettuce
½ cup boned chicken
½ cup mayonnaise dressing
3 slices broiled bacon
1 medium sized tomato
¾ package cream cheese
1 tablespoon prepared mustard
Ripe olives
Celery

Remove crusts and slice a medium sized loaf of bread lengthwise in three long slices. Place crisp lettuce leaves on the slice and add a layer of boned chicken. Spread a second slice of bread with mayonnaise and place dressing side down, on the chicken. Add crisp broiled bacon and thin sliced tomatoes as the sandwich filling on this second layer. Spread tomatoes with mayonnaise dressing and top with third long slice of bread. Mix 3 to 4 packages softened cream cheese with one tablespoon prepared mustard and frost the loaf. Garnish with ripe olives and parsley. Slice as for any ordinary loaf of bread. Serve on individual plates.

Hot Peanut Butter Sandwiches.

Toast 5 slices of bread on one side only. Then spread untoasted side with ½ cup peanut butter, and then with ¼ cup chili sauce. Top with slices of bacon and broil slowly until bacon is slightly browned and crisp. Serve with gherkin pickle fans.

Sandwich Spread.

2 teaspoons dry mustard
¼ cup sugar
¾ teaspoon salt
¼ cup milk
2 eggs (slightly beaten)
¼ cup vinegar
2 teaspoons lemon juice
6 tablespoons soft butter
1 3-ounce package cream cheese
¼ cup pimiento (chopped)
¼ cup olives (chopped)
2 tablespoons pickle (chopped)
1 tablespoon green pepper (chopped)

In a double boiler place the mustard, sugar, salt and milk. Blend in eggs and vinegar, and cook, stirring constantly, until thickened. Remove from flame, and add remaining ingredients. Store in refrigerator until using.

Savory Sandwich Filling.

1 pound American cheese.
¼ pound dried beef
1 cup condensed tomato soup
Run cheese and beef through food chopper, then moisten with the tomato soup. You will find that this filling will keep indefinitely if stored in the refrigerator.

WORTH REMEMBERING

Brown paper moistened in vinegar will polish tins until they shine like silver.

Save all paraffin as you remove it from your preserves and jelly. A man's pipe cleaner makes an excellent device for cleaning the spout of the coffee or tea pot.

Emptying a cream whipper and bowl is wasteful unless one takes time to scrape them carefully.

To prevent sugar from forming in preserves or jam, add a teaspoon of corn sirup to the contents of each pint.

When the faucets in your bathroom need polishing take a soft cloth wet in kerosene and it will brighten them instantly without injury.

Instead of peeling whole apples, first cut them in half, then in quarters, cut out the core and then peel. This is a great time saver.

Instead of peeling potatoes or scraping carrots, scrub same with a chore ball, and skins will come off easily without waste.

For a Higher Effect

Interior decorators have now decided that the use of a deep color on ceilings raises them, instead of lowers, as has been usually thought. A new trick is to carry the side wall paper up onto the ceiling about 10 inches, instead of dropping the ceiling color down on the sides. This creates an optical illusion of greater height.

HOW TO SEW

by Ruth Wyeth Spears

SO MANY requests for copies of these directions have been received, they are being printed again to accommodate those who neglected to clip and save them when they appeared before.

The mat is made of heavy white cotton cable cord such as you buy at the notion counter for seams and trimmings. The design is copied from a luncheon mat made years ago of corset strings! There was a fad at one time for sewing these in braided and scroll designs with fine stitches on the wrong side of the mat.

Follow the directions in the sketch, making the circles in pairs, using No. 40 cotton thread to sew them. Braid three cords together and then sew the braided strip around and around to make the center of the mat. Sew a row of the circles to the edge of this center part; then add another braided row, being careful to "ease in" the inside edge just enough to keep the mat flat. Continue adding alternate rows of circles and braiding until the mat is size desired. To join the ends of the braided rows, pull one end through the braiding to the wrong side of the mat; then trim the ends and sew them flat.

NOTICE: Every Homemaker should have copies of the two books containing 96 How to Sew articles. You may secure SEWING, For the Home Decorator; and Gifts, Novelties and Embroideries; both for 25 cents; and your choice of the Patchwork Quilt Leaflet showing 36 authentic stitches; or the Rag Rug Leaflet FREE, while the supply lasts. Don't delay, as the offer of both books at this low price will be withdrawn soon. Send your order at once to Mrs. Spears, 210 S. Desplaines St., Chicago, Ill.

Lemon Juice in Dressing.—Use lemon juice instead of vinegar in dressing for lettuce, and so increase your vitamins.

Repairing Last Year's Bathing Suit.—If last year's bathing suit is found to have a hole in it, the hole may be repaired and then covered with a small aquatic figure, such as a fish, diving girl or duck which may be purchased inexpensively.

Boiled Frosting.—If you have trouble making boiled frosting, try boiling the sugar and water until it forms a soft ball in the water, instead of till it spins a thread. Most people cook the sugar and water too long.

Removing a Splinter.—When a splinter has gone very deep into the flesh try extraction by steam. Heat a wide-mouthed bottle and fill it two thirds full of very hot water and place under the injured spot. The suction draws the flesh down when a little pressure is used, and the steam in a few minutes removes both splinter and inflammation. This method is particularly good when the splinter has been in for some time.

Keeping Mayonnaise.—Mayonnaise should be stored in covered jars on the upper shelf of the refrigerator, since it is likely to separate if it is kept in the coldest section.

Lasting Paper Dolls.—Children like to play with paper dolls. Try pasting them on coarse muslin and they will last much longer.

Beaten Egg Whites.—Never leave egg whites after they have been beaten still. If let stand they will flatten and will not beat up again.

When Bureau Drawers Stick.—If doors or bureau drawers stick in cold weather, a little wax rubbed on the surface where friction occurs will end the trouble.

HELP STOMACH DIGEST FOOD
Without Laxatives—and You'll Eat Everything from Soup to Nuts
The stomach should digest two pounds of food daily. When you eat heavy, greasy, coarse or rich foods, or when you are nervous, hurried or chew poorly—your stomach often pours out too much fluid. Your food doesn't digest and you have gas, heartburn, nausea, pain or sour stomach. You feel sick, and upset all over. Doctors say never take a laxative for stomach pain. It is dangerous and foolish. It takes time to make the excess stomach fluids harmless, relieve distress in no time and put you back on your feet. Relief is so quick it is amazing and one 35c package proves it.
